Abstract

The 2012 Census of State and Federal Correctional Facilities (CSFCF) was the eighth enumeration of state institutions and the fifth enumeration of federal institutions sponsored by the Bureau of Justice Statistics and its predecessors. Earlier censuses were conducted in 1974, 1979 (ICPSR 7852), 1984 (ICPSR 8444), 1990 (ICPSR 9908), 1995 (ICPSR 6953), 2000 (ICPSR 4021), and 2005 (ICPSR 24642). For each facility in the 2012 census, information was provided on security level, facility operator, sex of inmates housed, one-day counts by sex, percentage of inmates authorized to leave the facility, and anticipated changes to or closures of the facility.

The census counted prisoners held in the facilities, a custody count. Some inmates in custody in one jurisdiction may be held for a different jurisdiction. The custody count is distinct from a count of inmates under a correctional authority's jurisdiction, which includes all inmates over whom a correctional authority exercises control, regardless of where the inmate is housed. A jurisdictional count is more inclusive than a prison custody count and includes state and federal prisoners housed in local jails or other non-correctional facilities.

- Study 37294 -

The facility universe was developed from the Census of State and Federal Adult Correctional Facilities conducted in 2005. Each state's department of corrections was contacted to identify new facilities that had opened and facilities that had been closed since December 2005. Facilities were included in the enumeration if they were: (1) staffed with federal, state, local, or private employees, (2) held inmates primarily for state adult correctional authorities or the Federal Bureau of Prisons, (3) were physically or functionally separate from other facilities, and (4) were operational on June 30, 2012.

The census included the following types of adult correctional facilities:

- Prisons, penitentiaries, and correctional institutions
- Boot camps
- Residential community correction centers
- Prison farms
- Reception, diagnostic, and classification centers
- Road camps, forestry camps, and conservation camps
- Youthful offender facilities except in California
- Vocational training facilities
- Prison hospitals, including secure wings in public hospitals staffed with correctional security personnel
- Drug and alcohol treatment facilities for prisoners
- Pre-release centers and halfway houses
- State-authorized parolee return-to-custody facilities
- State-operated local detention facilities in Alaska, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Rhode Island, and Vermont

The census excluded the following types of institutions:

- Jails and other local and regional detention facilities
- Private facilities holding primarily for authorities other than the state adult correctional departments or the Federal Bureau of Prisons
- Military facilities
- Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) facilities
- Bureau of Indian Affairs facilities
- Detention facilities operated by the Federal Bureau of Prisons intended to hold inmates who are unsentenced
- Facilities operated by or for local government, including those housing state prisoners
- Facilities operated by the United States Marshals Service
- Hospital wings and wards not operated or staffed by correctional authorities
- Facilities that hold only juveniles

DEFINITION OF TERMS

- Study 37294 -

Community-based facilities - Correctional facilities were classified as community-based if 50% or more of the residents were regularly permitted to leave, unaccompanied by facility staff, to work or study in the community. Community-based facilities included entities such as halfway houses, residential treatment centers, restitution centers, and prerelease centers.

Confinement facilities - Correctional facilities in which less than 50% of the inmates left the facility unaccompanied on a regular basis. Confinement facilities included prisons, prison farms, penitentiaries, correctional centers, work camps, and reformatories.

High security facilities - High security facilities were described as supermax, maximum, close, or high-security facilities and were characterized by a wall or double-fence perimeter, armed tower and/or armed patrols. Cell housing was isolated in one of two ways: Within a cell block so that a prisoner escaping from a cell was confined within the building; or by double security from the perimeter by bars, steel doors, or other hardware. All entry or exit was via trap gate or sally port.

Medium security facilities - Medium security facilities were characterized by a single or double fence perimeter with armed coverage by towers or patrols. Housing units were cells, rooms, or dormitories. Dormitories were living units designed or modified to accommodate 12 or more persons. All entry or exit was via trap gate or sally port.

Minimum security facilities - Minimum or low security facilities were characterized by a fence or "posted" perimeter. Cell housing units were rooms or dormitories. Normal entry and exit were under visual surveillance.

Methodology and Processing

Notes

DATA REPORTING

The census counted prisoners held in the facilities, a custody count. Some inmates in custody in one jurisdiction may be held for a different jurisdiction. The custody count is distinct from a count of inmates under a correctional authority's jurisdiction, which includes all inmates over whom a correctional authority exercises control, regardless of where the inmate is housed. A jurisdictional count is more inclusive than a prison custody count and includes state and federal prisoners housed in local jails or other non-correctional facilities.

All entry or exit is via trap gate or sally port.

Medium — is characterized by a single or double fenced perimeter with armed coverage by towers or patrols. Housing units are cells, rooms, or dormitories. Dormitories are living units designed or modified to accommodate 12 or more persons. All entry or exit is via trap gate or sally port.

Minimum or low — is characterized by a fenced or "posted" perimeter. Cell housing units are rooms or dormitories. Normal entry and exit are under visual surveillance.
